

Novasys Medical Receives Award from California Legislators for “Contribution to Women’s Health”

NEWARK, CA – JUNE 15, 2005 – Novasys Medical, Inc., a developer of new technologies and therapies for the treatment of female pelvic disorders, was honored by California legislative leaders for its “Contribution to Women’s Health” during an awards ceremony today at the state capital in Sacramento.

“We are deeply honored to receive such a prestigious award from Assembly member Alberto Torrico and the legislature,” stated Debra Reisensthal, President and CEO of Novasys Medical. “As a company committed to women’s health, we appreciate the recognition of our efforts to advance awareness and understanding of important issues that impact women at different stages of their lives.”

Novasys Medical, with headquarters in Newark, California, is a privately held, venture-backed company initially focusing on a novel, non-surgical treatment for female stress urinary incontinence.

“Our goal is to seek out companies that make a difference in our local communities, as well as provide quality job opportunities,” commented Assembly member from District #20 Alberto Torrico. “Novasys represents a company that is not only contributing to the lives of our constituents in Newark, California, but to all women who will benefit from their new treatment.”
